5 New Year's resolutions to benefit the brain

Resolutions made at the start of a new year often focus on personal improvement. Giving up poor habits like smoking or drinking too much alcohol and losing weight through diet and exercise are some popular resolutions.

Health and wellness certainly dominates the resolution landscape. Improvement-minded individuals interested in gaining long-term benefits from their resolutions this year may want to consider ways to improve brain health and function. Here are five ideas to consider.

1. Get moving: Exercise does the body good and even positively affects the brain. The American Academy of Neurology has found aerobic exercise may play a significant role in reversing and preventing cognitive decline. Researchers have found that even a little exercise each day can result in improved brain function in less than six months. Andrew E. Budson, M.D., a professor of neurology at Boston University, also says aerobic exercise releases growth factors in the brain, which can help grow new brain cells.

2. Start a new hobby. When doing the same activities over and over, you eventually learn how to do those activities better. But doctors can't confirm this is actually helping the brain in a meaningful way. Rather, there is evidence that doing new things can be beneficial to the brain. So learning a new hobby, taking a class, or even learning to play a musical instrument can push the brain to improve from a cognitive standpoint, indicates The Healthy, a Reader's Digest brand.

3. Make more time for fun. Repeated stress can have detrimental effects on the body and mind. Harvard Health says stress has been linked to cognitive problems and a higher risk for Alzheimer's disease and other dementias. Taking time to relax and enjoy oneself can tame stress, and in turn, alleviate issues affecting memory and cognition.

4. Practice mindfulness more often. Mindfulness is an exercise in paying attention to one's surroundings, senses and more. Too often people are multi-tasking and never fully devoting their attention to one thing. Mindfulness gives the brain a break and brings a person into the present.

5. Eat a better diet. The benefit of eating healthy foods extends beyond the waistline. Many of the foods that are good for the heart are important for preventing cognitive decline and dementias. A 2015 systemic review found strong evidence for a protective effect of the Mediterranean diet, according to researchers at Deakin University School of Medicine in Australia.

By making brain health a priority when coming up with New Year's resolutions this year, individuals can benefit for years to come.

How to safely wipe out an old computer

The idea of losing all personal data on a computer, phone or tablet may send a person into a panic. How many times has a drive failed or a computer crashed and a person has worried that all of their essential files were lost forever? But there are times when it could be essential to clear data from a hard drive. That includes before selling the device, discarding it or giving it away.

NordVPN says someone can access sensitive information many think is gone forever after deletion, but actually could still be stored in the hard drive. Short of removing the hard drive, which would necessitate a new owner putting in a new hard drive, devices will have to be wiped clean to ensure sensitive information is not vulnerable. Devices can be wiped completely when they are changing hands. Consumer Reports says this is done by performing a "factory reset." This technically wipes the drive clean of personal data. Before initiating a factory reset, it's important to back up any important data onto the cloud or an external hard drive. Depending on the operating system, hard drive type and device, the instructions for wiping a hard drive will vary. It's best to do a search online or ask a technology expert about the most expeditious way to restore factory settings. Even still, there are some issues when wiping a drive that may prove problematic.

If a person recently purchased a computer, it likely has a solid-state drive. SSDs are faster and more stable than older, mechanical hard drives and use flash memory. That means securely deleting files is very hard. This is why Wirecutter suggests encrypting the drive, which uses a mathematical process to mix up the data using a key that only the device owner has. Without the key, files on the drive will look like gibberish if someone successfully recovers them. Encrypting an SSD computer is recommended even if one has no intention of selling or trading it later. Chromebooks usually use SSD but Google enables encryption by default. Chromebook users can skip this step when resetting. Again, encryption varies based on the OS, so it's best to study the right way to do so. Files do not automatically erase just because they are thrown in the trash. Before selling or donating a device, a hard drive wipe or encryption is recommended.

A teacher gave a balloon to every student, who had to inflate it, write their name on it and throw it in the hallway. The teacher then mixed all the balloons. The students were then given 5 minutes to find their own balloon. Despite a hectic search, no one found their balloon.

At that point, the teacher told the students to take the first balloon that they found and hand it to the person whose name was written on it. Within 5 minutes, everyone had their own balloon. The teacher said to the students: " these balloons are like happiness. We will never find it if everyone is looking for their own, but if we care about other people's happiness, we'll find ours too."

A man enters a barber shop for a shave. While the barber is foaming him up, he mentions the problems he has getting a close shave around the cheeks.

"I have just the thing," says the barber taking a small wooden ball from a nearby drawer. "Just place this between your cheek and gum."

The client places the ball in his mouth and the barber proceeds with the closest shave the man has ever experienced.

After a few strokes the client asks in garbled speech, "And what if I swallow it?"

"No problem," says the barber. "Just bring it back tomorrow like everyone else does."

Chase away chills (and sniffles) with soup

Soup is a staple anytime the weather is chilly or when a person feels like they are coming down with a cold. The warm, therapeutic effects of a delicious bowl of soup are hard to dismiss, and may sometimes work as well as the best medicines available.

While zucchini may be known as a summer vegetable, this popular squash is at home in a tasty soup any time of year. Top with giant, cheesy croutons for a filling and scrumptious crowd-pleaser.

This recipe for "Zucchini Soup with Cheddar Rusks" from "The Culinary Institute of America Book of Soups" (Lebhar-Friedman Books) by The Culinary Institute of America makes for a warming winter meal.

Zucchini Soup with Cheddar Rusks-Makes 8 servings

- 4 bacon strips, minced
- 2 onions, diced (about 2 1/2 cups)
- 4 garlic cloves, minced (about 2 teaspoons)
- 4 medium zucchini, diced (7 to 8 cups)
- 6 cups chicken broth
- 4 plum tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped, (about 1 cup)
- 1/2 cup tomato puree
- 4 tablespoons tarragon or cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons minced fresh basil
- 1/2 teaspoon salt, or to taste
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, or to taste
- 8 cheddar rusks (see below)

Cook the bacon in a soup pot over medium heat until the fat is released and the bacon bits are crisp, 6 to 8 minutes. Add the onions and garlic. Cook, stirring frequently, until the onions are a light golden brown, 8 to 10 minutes. Add the zucchini, cover the pot and cook until the zucchini starts to become translucent, about 5 minutes. Add the broth, tomatoes, tomato puree, and vinegar. Bring the soup to a simmer and cook until the vegetables are very tender and the soup has developed a good flavor, 15 to 20 minutes. Add the basil to the soup, and season with salt and pepper. Serve in heated bowls, garnished with cheddar rusks.

Cheddar Rusks-Makes 8

- 8 slices French or Italian bread (1/2-inch thick)
- 1 cup grated cheddar cheese

Toast the bread until golden brown on both sides. Preheat the broiler. Scatter the cheese evenly over the toasted bread and broil until the cheese bubbles and begins to brown.

Signs a computer may need some extra attention or require replacement

Working professionals know that few things can be as frustrating as a malfunctioning computer. A computer that's not working properly can interrupt work flow, lead to lost man hours and make it hard to get much done.

Whether it's a spinning color wheel or some other familiar indicator that a computer is not working at peak capacity, there are some telltale signs that a device needs some extra attention.

~ Frequent (often frustrating) glitches: Glitches are a common indicator that something is wrong with a computer. Glitches may make a computer freeze or crash. The latter occurs when the computer screen suddenly goes blank and the device reboots without prompting. In such instances, work may be lost and it may take a manual restart after the reboot to successfully open and use programs again.

~ Error messages: Frequent error messages are another indicator that a computer requires some extra attention. These messages may appear suddenly, even when using applications that have been running for some time.

~ Noise: When working smoothly, computers do not make much noise. However, when parts in the device have begun to malfunction, users may hear noises. One of the more common noises is a loud system fan. When this occurs, users can hear the fan produce a noise that makes it sound as though it's overexerting itself.

~ Sluggishness: Much like their human users, computers can exhibit signs of sluggishness when they feel a little overwhelmed. If a computer is sluggish, chances are its hard drive is overwhelmed and running out of room. Moving large files and folders to an external hard drive and then deleting them from the computer's hard drive can help a computer perform without the sluggishness.

Some of these problems can be addressed without replacing the computer. For example, a noisy fan may just need to be replaced. And installing some extra memory can improve performance when a computer is working slowly. However, persistent glitches and frequent error messages may indicate it's time to replace a computer. Professionals are urged to speak with their counterparts in IT to remedy any computer issues that are interrupting workflow and making it hard to get work done on time.

Martin Luther King, Jr. and other notable civil rights activists

Each January, millions of individuals across the United States and even beyond the nation's borders pause to reflect on the contributions of Martin Luther King, Jr. Born in Atlanta on January 15, 1929, King's life was tragically cut short in 1968, when he was assassinated in Memphis.

Though King's life was short, his impact was enormous. Ordained a pastor at the tender age of 19 in 1948, King became an influential civil rights leader who was named president of the Montgomery Improvement Association in 1955 and chairman of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) in 1957. King was a noted writer and orator, and his "Letter From Birmingham Jail," written in 1963 in response to criticisms of efforts to combat segregation in Alabama, and "I Have a Dream" speech delivered during the March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom continue to inspire millions more than half a century later.

In 1964, King received the Nobel Peace Prize in Oslo, Norway, capping off a year that began with his being named Time magazine's "Man of the Year" in January. King was shot and killed on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel in Memphis less than four years after he received the Nobel Prize, but his impact continues to be felt and inspire generations of individuals. As the nation celebrates the birth of Martin Luther King, Jr. this January, individuals also can take time to consider the contributions of other influential advocates for civil rights.

~ Bayard Rustin: The subject of the critically acclaimed 2023 biopic "Rustin," Bayard Rustin was a contemporary of Martin Luther King, Jr. who played an integral role in the March on Washington. Rustin was a homosexual and fought for others even while forced to keep parts of his own life in the shadows, as homosexuality was criminalized for much of his life. Rustin maintained a commitment to advocacy throughout his life, as evidenced by his public advocacy for gay rights in the 1980s.

~ Fannie Lou Hamer: Born into poverty in Mississippi in 1919, Fannie Lou Hamer became an outspoken advocate for civil rights in the 1960s. A survivor of police brutality after she and fellow activists were taken into police custody after entering a Mississippi cafe where they were refused service in 1963, Hamer also played an influential role in the women's rights movement and encouraged and inspired many African Americans in her home state to become registered voters.

~ John Lewis: The late John Lewis served in the United States House of Representatives from 1987 until his death in 2020. Lewis was born into extreme poverty in Alabama in 1940 but became a widely respected and influential advocate for civil rights. Inspired after hearing a radio address by King in 1955, Lewis ultimately participated in many of the more notable civil rights demonstrations in the 1960s, including the Nashville sit-ins, the Freedom Rides and the March on Washington.

WINNER

Meet our December Peddler's Post T-shirt winner Mike Scofield! Mike is a O.G born in Tampa, Florida who currently resides in Bushnell and runs a small locksmith business (you can find him on page 14 or 15 each month). Prior to becoming a local locksmith for Central Florida, he worked for American Airlines for 25 years as a freight service clerk. He has some great stories from those times, if you run into him ask him how he got the nickname "Mad Mike Scofield" (said in my best "Mean Gene Okerlund voice).

Mike can be found enjoying his free time going to local restaurants like The Diner or Dillon's Cinnamon Sticks Restaurant & Bakery, taking a walk on the Withlacoochee State Trail, and attending local events and parades.

When we asked Mike what he likes about the Peddler's Post he stated, "THE WHOLE THING, the stories, the puzzles and all the local events."

We met up at Tony's Auto Clinic II because that is the first place that Mike picked up the Peddler's Post just before becoming an advertiser himself. Tony and Mike are great guys, and we are happy to call them both not only advertisers but also our friends! Making clients into friends has been one of the many blessings that had come with operating the Peddler's Post. Thanks for playing Mike, we hope you enjoy your new t-shirt and thank you for being a valuable part of the Peddler's Post! We appreciate you!

Clients are the reason we do what we do.
They're the fuel that powers our passion, inspiration, and motivation to dream big.

The link between sleep and mental health

Sufficient sleep is often an unsung hero of overall health. When people get enough sleep, their bodies are in better position to fend off illness and the rest ensures they have enough energy to tackle whatever challenges they confront.

The American Academy of Sleep Medicine and the Sleep Research Society jointly recommend that adults get at least seven hours of sleep per night. A good night's sleep is often discussed in terms of how it can affect physical health, but adequate rest also can have a profound impact on mental health. Sleep and mental health are intertwined, and the link between the two may be even more significant than was once believed.

- ~ Sleep and depression: The Sleep Foundation notes that sleeping issues have historically been seen as a byproduct of depression. Indeed, the National Center for Biotechnology Information indicates that roughly three in four individuals with depression exhibit symptoms of insomnia. However, the Sleep Foundation reports that growing evidence now indicates poor sleep may induce depression.
- ~ Sleep and anxiety disorders: Data from the National Institutes of Health indicates that one in five adults are affected by an anxiety disorder. The Mayo Clinic reports that feelings of nervousness and fear are hallmarks of anxiety disorders, and such feelings can make it hard to fall asleep. However, a 2013 study published in the journal Neuroscience found that poor sleep can activate anxiety. In addition, the Sleep Foundation reports that chronic insomnia may be a predisposing trait among individuals who eventually develop anxiety disorders.
- ~ Sleep and bipolar disorder: A 2015 study published in the journal Sleep Medicine Clinics found a strong association between sleep disturbances and symptom worsening in bipolar disorder. The study highlighted evidence that suggests sleeping problems worsen or induce the manic and depressive episodes that are a hallmark of bipolar disorder. Researchers believe that successful treatment for insomnia, which would produce fewer sleep disturbances, can reduce the impact of bipolar disorder.
- ~ Sleep and ADHD: The Sleep Foundation notes that sleeping problems are common in people with ADHD. Difficulty sleeping is commonly and correctly seen as a side effect of ADHD. However, the Sleep Foundation indicates sleep problems also may aggravate issues affecting attention and behavior that characterize ADHD.

The link between sleep and mental health is noteworthy. Sleep issues were once believed to be a byproduct of mental health issues. Though that remains true, there's growing evidence that sleeping problems also can exacerbate or even trigger mental health problems. More information is available at sleepfoundation.org.

3 ways people can boost their mental health every day

Mental health issues have garnered considerable attention in recent years, but the scope of the global mental health crisis may be even greater than people realize. A recent study co-led by researchers at Harvard Medical School and the University of Queensland that was published in The Lancet Psychiatry in fall 2023 concluded that one out of every two people in the world will develop a mental health disorder at some point in their lifetime. That makes mental health disorders a more common problem than cancer, heart disease and other physical ailments that tend to garner more attention than mental health issues.

Anyone experiencing mental health issues is urged to speak with a medical professional who specializes in such areas. Mental health issues may not manifest with symptoms like broken bones that common sense suggests require the assistance of a licensed medical professional, but that does not mean issues affecting the mind or a person's outlook do not require the help of someone trained to deal with them. Much like people can heal from a broken bone after seeing a medical professional, individuals confronting mental health issues have much to gain from working with a mental health specialist.

A 2021 study from the United Kingdom-based Mental Health Foundation published in the American Journal of Health Promotion found 29 strategies people can employ to protect their mental health. The study considered mental health research and the views of mental health experts, but also input from the general public regarding ways they confront mental health issues. It's important that anyone dealing with mental health issues not conflate these strategies with treatment. Though they can help protect mental health, they should be seen as a supplement to treatment overseen by a licensed mental health professional. A rundown of the 29 strategies can be found at mentalhealth.org.uk, but the following are three recommendations that anyone can apply in their daily lives.

1. Spend more time in nature. The calming effects of nature have been noted for centuries, if not longer. The American Psychological Association notes that spending time in nature benefits both physical and psychological well-being in humans. Perhaps that's one reason why participants in the MHF study reported walks in nature was their preferred way to cope with stress stemming from the COVID-19 pandemic in 2020. The Japanese practice of forest bathing has been noted for its positive effects on mental health, but even those without ready access to wooded areas should know that simply spending more time outdoors each day can positively affect mental health.

2. Avoid using drugs or alcohol as a coping mechanism. The MHF notes that any relief offered by drugs and alcohol is temporary and can even exacerbate existing mental health issues. The American Addiction Centers reports that coping mechanisms are compulsions or habits formed over time that serve to help people manage particular situations or issues, including stress. However, the AAC also notes that not all coping mechanisms are beneficial and some, including drug and alcohol use, are maladaptive and destructive. After a particularly stressful day, or during times when people are experiencing anxiety and/or depression, avoid looking at drugs or alcohol as means to coping.

3. Get enough sleep. The MHF notes that adults need between seven and nine hours of sleep per night. Some may see seven hours or more per night as a luxury, but it's important that such an outlook changes. The Columbia University Department of Psychiatry notes that there is now robust evidence to support a link between sleep and mental health. Insufficient or even poor sleep has been found to increase negative emotional responses to stressors. Perhaps even more noteworthy is that poor or insufficient sleep decreases positive emotions. So it's vital to recognize the important role that adequate, good-quality sleep has on mental health.

These are just a handful of approaches individuals can take to boost their mental health each day.

The Philadelphia Experiment and the Florida Connection

By Maxim Furek

The Philadelphia Experiment is an urban myth that, after many twists and turns, reached a dubious conclusion, here, in the Sunshine State. Although unknown to most researchers, Frederick G. Tracy and Dr. Morris Jessup may have held the key to unlocking the secret of this eighty-year-old mystery.

As the legend goes, The Philadelphia Experiment was a World War II experiment, that accidentally teleported the USS Eldridge, a destroyer escort, over 200 miles from Philadelphia to Norfolk, Virginia. Utilizing an innovative technology known as "cloaking," Tesla coils were attached around the ship and then charged with high voltages of electricity, attempting to render the ship and its crew invisible to the enemy. But, during the "return trip," the crew suffered horrible physiological effects, some partially embedded in the steel deck yet still alive. The survivors were declared insane and sent away to military hospitals. Their families were told that they were lost at sea.

USS Antietam

Frederick G. Tracy, LTCM Ret., served in the United States Navy from 1944--1954. Like many sailors serving on the East Coast, Tracy heard ominous rumors about the Philadelphia Experiment and a degaussing operation that went haywire.

Degaussing Technique

During World War II, magnetic mines wreaked havoc on Allied shipping crossing the Atlantic. The degaussing technique was a secret procedure that neutralized the magnetic field of a ship's hull using electricity generated through massive cables. The method rendered the vessel invisible to radar and less vulnerable to enemy mines and torpedoes.

Tracy was involved in a degaussing operation conducted at a top-secret Annapolis, Maryland, installation, while serving aboard the USS Antietam an aircraft carrier.

Wrapped with three-inch diameter cables spaced 15 feet apart, the Antietam was bombarded with considerable electricity charges for three days, time enough to penetrate the eight-inch-thick steel hull. But, like the USS Eldridge, the intended degaussing procedure had harmful effects. Tracy's exposure rendered his lung capillaries virtually useless. He suffered from bilateral bulla emphysema, requiring him to carry about a supply of liquid oxygen. At 60, he had shock-white hair and glassy, reddened eyes.

Tracy claimed he had proof that the Philadelphia Experiment occurred, citing an official 1945 document. Due to widespread rumors and low morale, the Secretary of the Navy, Admiral James Forrestal, issued a directive admitting to the allegations. Forrestal's memo was read to them during the final days of World War II and acknowledged that the USS Eldridge's degaussing operation had gone wrong. The crew were sworn to secrecy and repeatedly warned that it would be an act of treason to reveal the directive's contents.

Despite eyewitness accounts from Tracy and others, the U.S. Navy maintains that no such experiment was ever conducted. Furthermore, authorities deny that the physics the experiment is claimed to be based on is nonexistent. After contacting the National Archives and Records Administration in Washington, D.C., Richard A. von Doenhoff responded to this writer:

"As far as the Department of the Navy can determine, the fictitious story of the destroyer (USS Eldridge) from the Delaware River off the League Island Navy Yard to Hampton Roads back in 1943 began as a practical joke among staff members of the Naval Research Laboratory here in Washington. The humorous commentary on a theoretical paper on electromagnetism got out of hand and soon achieved the status of fact and legend."

Dead Men Don't Tell Tales

Still, others believe that something happened in 1943 and that astronomer Dr. Morris K. Jessup played a vital role. His book, The Case for the UFO, attracted the attention of the U.S. Navy, determined to find out what the scientist knew about World War II experiments.

On April 19, 1959, Jessup contacted oceanographer Dr. J. Manson Valentine. Claiming to have made a breakthrough regarding the Philadelphia Experiment, Jessup arranged to meet with him the next day. According to Valentine:

"He was convinced that the Navy, in seeking to create a magnetic cloud for camouflage purposes in October 1943, had uncovered a potential that could temporarily, and if strong enough, perhaps permanently, rearrange the molecular structure of people and materials so that they would pass into another dimension with further implications of predictable and as yet uncontrolled teleportation."

Jessup never revealed his breakthrough discovery. A Florida park attendant discovered his body on April 20, 1959. Jessup's 1958 Chevy Station Wagon was parked in Miami's Matheson Hammock Park. The car's engine was still running, and a hosepipe attached to the exhaust had been fed through the driver's side window.

Although Jessup's death was considered an apparent suicide, some believed he had been murdered for what he knew about UFOs, anti-gravity propulsion, and the Philadelphia Experiment. After 80 years, The Philadelphia Experiment remains one of the most obscure wartime mysteries. Fred Tracy and Dr. Morris Jessup may have provided some answers, but took their secrets to the grave.

Nachos make the ideal game day snack

Big games dot the college and professional football landscapes each year beginning in late summer and ending in mid-winter. But no games are bigger than those that take place once the calendar turns to a new year. That's when the postseason begins in both college and professional football.

Game watches with fellow fans, family and friends are a great way to make playoff football even more enjoyable. With so many big games on the horizon, football fans would be wise to ready their culinary arsenal. Whether you're hosting at home or going to a game watch at a fellow fan's house, keep in mind that food and football are a great match. Certain dishes have long since staked their claim on the game watch dinner and snacking tables, and nachos certainly need no introduction to football fans. As this year's playoffs kick off, football fans can try this recipe for "Loaded Beef Nachos" courtesy of AllRecipes.com.

Loaded Beef Nachos (Serves 4)

Taco Seasoning:

- 5 teaspoons paprika
- 1 1/4 teaspoons garlic powder
- 1 1/4 teaspoons ground cumin
- 1 1/4 teaspoons onion powder
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 1 teaspoon oregano leaves
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt

Nachos:

- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 cup diced onion
- 1 cup diced green bell pepper
- 1 10-ounce can diced tomatoes with green chiles (such as RO-TEL™)
- 1 15-ounce can Mexican-style corn (optional)
- 1 16-ounce can refried beans
- 1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese, or as needed
- 4 ounces tortilla chips, or as needed

Toppings (optional):

- 1/2 cup sour cream (optional)
- 1/2 cup salsa (optional)
- 1/4 cup sliced black olives (optional)
- 1/4 cup sliced jalapenos (optional)
- 1/4 cup green onion

For taco seasoning: Stir paprika, garlic powder, cumin, onion powder, chili powder, oregano, and salt together in a small bowl; set aside.

Heat oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat; cook and stir ground beef in the hot skillet until browned and crumbly, 5 to 7 minutes. Stir in onion and green pepper; cook and stir with oil and juices from browned meat until much of the liquid has evaporated, about 2 minutes more.

Stir 1/2 can diced tomatoes with chilies and Mexican-style corn into skillet. Season beef mixture to taste with prepared taco seasoning mix.

Stir together the remaining 1/2 can diced tomatoes with chilies and refried beans in a microwave-safe bowl. Microwave on high until heated through, stirring every 30 seconds, 1 to 3 minutes.

To assemble nachos: Lay half of tortilla chips in a single layer on a microwave-safe plate, then drop teaspoons of refried beans onto chips, followed by meat mixture and shredded cheese. Repeat with remaining chips, beans, meat, and cheese to make a second layer. Microwave on high until cheese is melted and nachos are warm, 2 to 3 minutes. Top with sour cream, salsa, olives, jalapenos, and green onion as desired.

 As midnight approaches, a woman begins soaking a few sponges.

When the clock hits midnight, she begins squeezing the water out of the sponges. Her husband looks at her curiously and asks, "Honey, what are you doing?" She replies, "Oh, you know, I'm wringing in the New Year!"

How to host a fun playoff watch party

January is among the colder months of the year, but for football fans things are just starting to heat up when the calendar turns to a new year. In addition to featuring the College Football Playoff semifinals (January 1) and championship game (January 8), January also ushers in the National Football League playoffs, which begins with wild card weekend on January 13. That schedule can warm the hearts of football fans no matter how cold it may be outside.

With so many great games on the horizon, now is the time for football fanatics to brush up on their hosting skills. A game watch party is a great way to enjoy the action with fellow fans, friends and family, and the following are some ways hosts can take those football festivities up a notch.

- ~ Provide ample room and seating. When hosting a party for the big game, pick a room in the house with enough room and seating to accommodate all of your guests. Folding chairs can be brought in to the viewing area to ensure everyone has a seat, but the right viewing area is one where additional seats won't make everyone feel as though they are sitting on top of one another. A basement or open concept living room makes for an ideal viewing area.
- ~ Set up more than one viewing area. Football certainly has its share of fanatical fans, but it also has plenty of casual fans who may attend a watch party to socialize more than see the action. Multiple viewing areas can accommodate various types of fans and solve any space and seating issues that arise. A separate kids-only viewing area also can accommodate young fans.
- ~ Stock up on finger foods. When planning a watch party menu, keep in mind that most people will be eating in the viewing area instead of at a dinner table. Finger foods are ideal in such situations. Hosts who want to cook for the crowd can prepare small dishes like meatball or chicken sliders, chicken wings and frozen pizzas cut into bite-size pieces. And don't forget portable snacks like pretzels, chips, diced vegetables with hummus, and nachos.
- ~ Take your tech for a test run. Food and accommodations might garner the bulk of hosts' attention in the days leading up to the big game, but don't forget to take your tech for a test run. Many homes have abandoned traditional cable television in favor of streaming services, so if your home is among the legions of cord cutters, confirm in the days ahead that your streaming app is working and that you have the latest version of the app installed on all devices that will be used to show the game. Check speakers as well to ensure everyone can hear the broadcast clearly regardless of where they're sitting.

Playoff season is set to heat up on the gridiron. Game watches make for a great way to enjoy the game with fellow fans.

THIS MONTH I AM SHARING A STORY ABOUT AN EXPERIENCE
MY FAMILY RECENTLY HAD. WHILE

VERY IMPORTANT STORY ABOUT
RESPONSIBLE PET OWNERSHIP,
HARD CHOICES, TOUGH LOVE,
FOREVER HOMES AND FREEDOM.

We have some sad news to share with you all. Gracie May is no longer with us. She crossed over rainbow bridge last Thursday (December 14th, 2023). While I could leave it at that and distract from the questions that I know will come as to what happened, I felt it was best to share her story, our story, with you. I (Amy) have always had Pitbull mix rescues. Shelters and local rescues are often full of Pit-Mixes, no matter where you live. I have always made it my mission to adopt rather than shop for my Furr babies and I have always had great results finding family companions who live their entire lives enjoying this world with me. This is my intention for every pet I bring into my home.

A little backstory. Matt and I adopted Gus in May of 2021 just before buying the Peddler's Post. He was lonely and we thought it was best to get him a playmate to grow up with. Gracie May was being shared on the Citrus County Animal shelters page and I had seen her be adopted out and returned to the shelter not once but twice. I thought with my previous experience with Pitts that we would be a great home for her, and we decided to adopt her in April of 2022. Immediately we noticed some behavioral problems with her being very destructive when left alone. We also noticed some issues when it was time to get a nail trim or a checkup at the vet. She would lose her mind. We assumed this was related to her previous life and committed to working through these issues with her. We started her on some anxiety medication to help in stressful situations.

Other than these two BIG stressors everything else was great at first and she appeared to be quite a social dog. We went to and worked community events together; she enjoyed meeting new people and even other animals. She walked nicely on a leash; she and Gus were the best of friends for the most part; we took them everywhere with us and loved trying new restaurants with the pups in tow. We live a very scheduled life. A walk away from the house every morning. A walk around noon within the yard, play time after dinner and bed at 7:30.

The first time Gracie had an outburst where I did not recognize her was at the Manatee festival earlier this year. Out of the blue she noticed another dog walking with their owner, and she went crazy trying to get at him. We left immediately and I was able to calm her down quite easily after we got out of sight. When it didn't happen again for a long time, we brushed it off as she just did not like that other dog's vibe.

She had an eye for squirrels and cats since the beginning, however I was always able to redirect her with positive reinforcement. Late this summer we started to notice some misdirected aggression from Gracie towards Gus when she was unable to get at the cats and squirrels we came across on the path. We worked with her to know her triggers and used positive reinforcement to gain her interest until the stressors moved along. We felt like we made progress until we started noticing this misdirected anger show up with fence line aggression toward Gus.

October, we attended the annual event for the Boys and Girls Club in Hernando. Last year both Gus and Gracie were big hits and enjoyed the event and meeting all the people in the community. When we got invited to take the dogs back this year we agreed. I knew 15 minutes in that it was a bad decision, but by that time it was too late. This year Gracie was not okay at the event, and I spent most of the evening with her in the truck waiting in the AC.

The last few months with Gracie have been very hard. Our daily walks are often cut short because Gracie not only lunges out at other animals but also has started to really bark and become aggressive with people. We invested in her a dog treadmill, as we had been advised that a tired dog is a good dog. Gracie really seemed to enjoy her treadmill. She was eager to please me and seemed to enjoy our additional one on one time together. However, the more time I spent working with her, the more aggressive she became towards Gus. It was becoming more and more evident that she wanted him out of the way.

While she would always listen to me, she was doing it very begrudgingly. Last week She attempted to bite me when I would not allow her to chase a cat on the walk path. Matt and I had started asking ourselves how we would feel if she ever hurt one of us or someone else. Not because we thought it could happen but with her aggressive behavior becoming worse and worse, we were coming into the knowing that it was just a matter of time.

Thursday, I went grocery shopping, and the pups were near me when putting the food away. Food was never an issue with Gus and Gracie, they ate next to each other from the first night and every other night since. In a matter of seconds Gracie was on top of Gus and rushed him 30 feet while biting him again and again, before I was able to grab hold of her collar and let Gus escape. I got the door open and let Gus inside the house and with Gracie lunging at me managed to get myself inside. They had tangled up before but never like this. I had Gus inside bleeding and Gracie lunging at the door trying to get inside to reengage the situation.

Gus was absolutely terrified, and I was as well. I called Matt to come home and reached out to their vet. An hour later when the vet called back and before Matt got home Gracie was still very much engaged in wanting to get into the house to fight. I had never seen her this out of control. The vet was very aware of the progression of Gracie's aggressive tendencies and shared that she was really scared for our family. She recommended that it may be best at this time to go ahead and put Gracie down.

When Matt got home Gracie was still very engaged in getting back to the fight. It was like she had something inside her snap. Matt and I looked at the situation in front of us in depth and made the tough decision that it would be best for everyone to follow the recommendations of the vet. Do we feel good about the decision, no, we are sad. Are we at peace with the decision, yes, we are.

When we took on Gracie May we took full responsibility for her. Knowing what she was capable of, there was no option to rehome her or place her back in the shelter system that already failed her twice prior. We deserved safety but equally important Gracie May deserved peace.

We went back and forth with how we were going to share this information with you all. We figured we would have some people support us and likely receive some heat. The reality of the matter is I have shared her story with you all since we adopted her, and it was no time to start being quiet.

I must admit I failed Gracie because I did not know who she was. When we adopted her, we were told that she was a Black Mouth Curr pit mix. Turns out Gracie May was a part of the designer backyard breed called the Pit-Pei. She was bred to behave the way she was behaving. She needed to be at the top of the pack and should never have been surrendered to a shelter system that could not support her high demand needs. The Pit-Pei needs a very strong disciplined background from an early age and needs to be the only animal in the home. This is the hard part about getting a dog from the shelter or a rescue, sometimes you never really know what you are getting no matter how prepared you think you are.

I am humbled by the fact that I could not love the crazy out of my Gracie May. I find solace in the fact that I loved her with all I had and made sure she would never be homeless again in a world that didn't understand her. Rest in Peace Gracie May.
